

This March Jeff came within just a few seconds of broadcasting his first NCAA Tournament game. The Montana State men's basketball team made an improbable run in the Big Sky conference tournament, first eliminating arch-rival Montana, then beating top-seeded Weber State in a pair of intense road victories. In the Big Sky Championship game, the Bobcats ran into the defending champions, Portland State. An entertaining game throughout, the Cats hit a three-pointer with ten seconds left to tie the game. However, the Vikings made a basket with three games left to deprive Montana State of its share of March Madness.

After a long drive back to California and a few days of rest, Jeff was back at work in Lancaster preparing for the JetHawks baseball season, which began April 9th. Only a few weeks into the season, Jeff has already called the action during games featuring some of the top prospects in Minor League Baseball, including Houston Astros top hitter Jason Castro and San Francisco Giants ace hurler Madison Bumgarner.

Always busy studying for all three of his sports, Jeff is already getting excited for his third season behind the microphone for Montana State football. The season kicks off Saturday, September 5th when the Bobcats travel to East Lansing, Michigan to battle Michigan State.